WELLNESS MADE EASY: To consume more vitamin C, think beyond the orange. Americans get more vitamin C by far from oranges and orange juice than from any other food, but the following contain even more C than an orange: one cup of strawberries, one bell pepper (red & yellow ones have the most), one kiwi fruit, one cup of broccoli or Brussels sprouts, or half a papaya. These supply at least the daily recommended dietary allowance for vitamin C. Get vitamin C from foods, not pills, since foods come with many other healthful compounds, some of which work together. The School of Public Health - University of California, Berkley
